

Why Learn Korean?

4 Big Reasons Why You Should Learn Korean

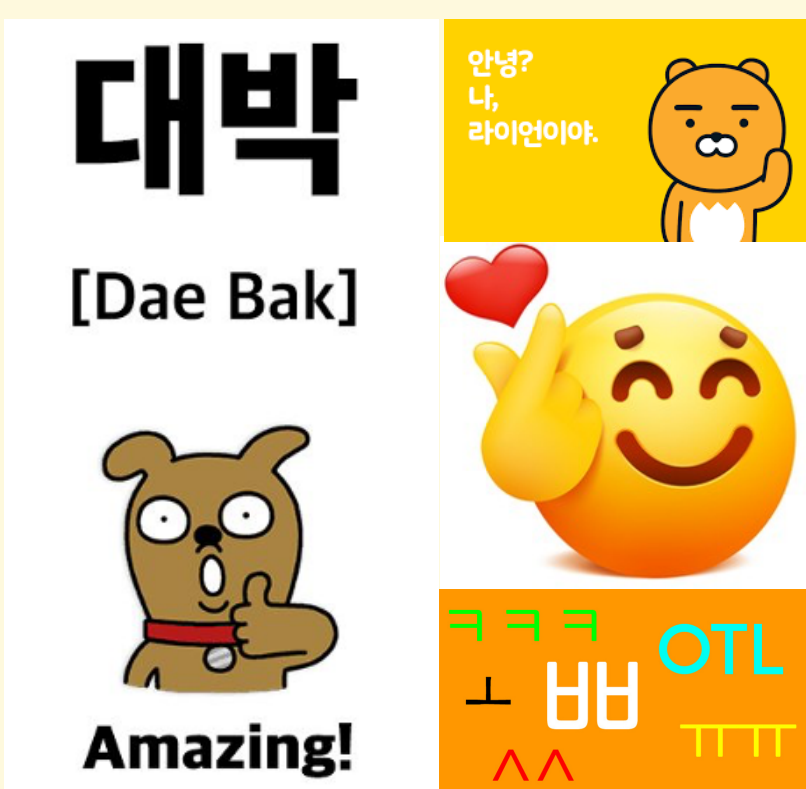

Korean is one of the most popular foreign languages to learn in the United States. Today, more than 350 languages other than English are spoken in the US, and Korean (1.1 million) is the eighth most spoken language following French among US citizens. Also, Korean is the only foreign language that has steadily grown in student enrollment at colleges.

Due to its geopolitical location and economic power, Korean is also one of the most “critical languages” for the national interests and security. If you expect your future career will involve a lot of international business or diplomacy, and intercultural interaction and interpretation, Korea is a very useful language to learn!

Don't forget Korea's ever-growing global cultural influence! BTS has been smashing records and has established themselves as a global phenomenon. The movie Parasite is the first foreign language film ever to win in all the top categories including Best Picture at the 92nd Academy Awards.

Korean is fun to speak and LEARN! The Korean alphabet Hangul is so efficiently designed that you can learn how to read Korean in just a few hours. Korean language is full of interesting and inspiring elements such as honorific systems, fun expressions that mimic sounds and motion, and fast-changing, newly-coined vocabulary almost exclusively used by our generation. Being able to speak Korean is 대박!
